

JOHN POELSTRA

EXECUTIVE COACH &
FACILITATOR

BACKGROUND

It seems that my whole life has been about discovery, searching, questioning and clarifying. It started with managing and completing financial statement audits as a CPA, led to testing software and managing software releases as project manager, and online marketer for a well-known cloud computing platform.

Along the way I mentored and managed teams of people while questioning what I saw, seeking to make sense of the world around me. Some people saw this as skepticism. Eventually I saw it as one of my super powers to reach the essence of things.

Rather than suppress or ignore my feelings, I followed them. From that, new paths began to unfold. One path opened up around coaching by signing up for an intensive, world class coach training program. I changed as a result of this program and I became convinced I could help others do the same.

As I lived into bringing order and clarity to the chaos and confusion of my life and career I've learned, and deeply believe, that we can't get something new or change a situation until we ARE different. By that, I mean we must live into and BE what we want to have instead of KNOW more about it through the illusive, tempting path of knowledge acquisition. I help people BE the person they want and need to be to in order to achieve what they want in any situation.
